Improving Americans.

"Nothing is fixed but the certainty of change," said Goethe, and we know that the future American will represent a change. He may be taller or shorter or thinner or fatter than the American of today, but there is nothing in the existing state of society—and we use society in its broad sense—to indicate that he will not be better in many ways. Confidence in this is based largely on the evident determination of the American of today to leave our institutions and our ideals better than he found them. Every American, native or foreign born, wants his children to have a better education than it was possible for him to secure. He wants to have his children live in a community of higher standards and ideals than he has; he wants betterment in local, state and national conditions, and the result of the want will be improvement and a demand by his children for still greater improvement.—St. Paul Pioneer-Press.

In a Quandary.

The young lady sighed deeply and was almost affected to tears.

"Harold," she said, "declares that if I don't marry him he will end his life. And I am afraid he will."

She stifled a sob, then continued: "And Randolph declares that if I don't marry him he will go into politics and become great and famous, and then he says I shall see what I have missed. And I am afraid he will keep his word too."

Overcome by emotion, she buried her face in her hands, not knowing whether to save a life or to spare the country another politician.—Exchange.

Why Defend Taft?

(By Isaiah Mitchell, Sr., of Denver, Colorado.)

Sir: As a subscriber of The Bee for nearly two years, it is indeed strange that you should defend President Taft against Rev. Waldron's calling his attention to the promotion of colored soldiers to be second lieutenants in the United States Army. There are only four regiments from which these promotions can be made, viz.: the Ninth and Tenth U. S. Cavalry, and the Twenty-fourth and Twenty-fifth Infantry. Has the rule been complied with in the cases of these soldiers? Rev. Waldron's letter is a reminder—no crime. Please call his attention to page 98, of the July Crisis. I presume that you get it as an exchange. He is Commander-in-Chief of the Army and Navy—1823 Vermont avenue Northwest, Washington, D. C.
